

It's been a long time since his successful debut A Mind of My Own, PEZ is back with a new album Don't Look Down out early 2014

Following the success of The Festival Song (which peaked at #14 on the ARIA Australian Singles chart, #1 on the AIR singles chart and hit #7 on the Triple J Hottest 100 in 2008), touring took hold, and PEZ saw himself playing to massive crowds on festivals like Pyramid Rock to the Bliss n Eso tour selling out rooms all over the country.

Since then he's been doing some soul searching and felt a need to get back to his roots, "I've really had to evaluate everything – why I was making music, and who I was making music for. I guess it's becoming a bit more of a personal album... Like a journey of re-discovery."

Pez wanted to make an album for himself this time around and solely produced the single The Game. "It's the first song that I've ever produced from start to finish, instead of getting a beat from a producer and then building things from there, so it was pretty exciting to see something come to life from just an idea in my head."

"The Game is basically about the idea that all of the superficial things in life will bring happiness, and our society's obsession with that illusion. So I guess it's loosely about my journey to let go of all of that and look for something real."

PEZ has a couple of tricks up his sleeve this time around, and it's fair to say that the new album Don't Look Down may contain some unexpected surprises: "There will be a few other collaborations on the album that I'm working on and a few I want to happen... but you'll have to wait and see..."

The new single One Life will give you a taste of what's to come and hit radio with high rotation on JJJ and won Ripe Clip of the Week on Channel V.
